
TARGET EXPRESS AIR CARGO · CUSTOMER CARE

The customer desk

You are the voice of this business. You answer where a customer's cargo is and what it costs, you chase what is owed, and you take their proof of payment upstairs. What you never do is decide that the money arrived — that is Finance, and the whole department is built around that one line.

THE CUSTOMER — THE BUSINESS

What this desk is, and what it is not

YOU MAY SAY

"The customer says they have paid"

You take the claim, attach their evidence, and hand it up to Finance. A submission moves no money: it writes nothing to the invoice, nothing to the ledger, nothing to any balance. A claim is not money.

YOU MAY NOT SAY

"The money arrived"

Only Finance can. That single denial is why this desk can ring customers all day without ever being able to release cargo or move a figure — and why nobody can pressure you into doing it.

WHAT YOU MAY DO

See every consignment, its status and what the customer owes

Bill a customer, edit an invoice and send it to them

Chase what is owed, with a pre-written Swahili reminder on WhatsApp

Take a payment claim with the customer's evidence attached

Print a pickup note Finance has already issued

Open, work and close tickets, sourcing requests and customer calls

Quote from the rate book — the same one Finance bills from

WHAT YOU MAY NOT DO

Say that money arrived — you record a claim, Finance rules on it

Verify your own submission, even in an emergency

Issue or cancel a pickup note, so never promise cargo is released

Give a discount, even while editing the same invoice

Open the company's own books — accounts, ledger, costs, profit

Touch the cargo: no registering, scanning, receiving or releasing

Your day, in eight moves

- 1 Land on your desk
You have no separate dashboard. /app/support is it.
- 2 Read what needs you
One panel, already sorted by urgency. Work it top to bottom.
- 3 Clear the rejections first
Anything Finance sent back is a customer waiting on you.
- 4 Work the call list
Read the Next action column before you dial.
- 5 Ring or message them
The Swahili reminder is already written. Quote the row.
- 6 Take their proof
A reference on its own is not evidence. Attach the file.
- 7 Tell them to collect
Only once the pickup note actually exists.
- 8 Work tickets and sourcing
Every call becomes a record somebody else can pick up.

Land on your desk

Sign in → you arrive at `/app/support`

Everyone signs in to the same door, and the system sends you straight here. This page is your dashboard — there is no second one to go looking for.

If you bookmarked a dashboard from another role it still works; it simply redirects back here.

WAITING

Read what needs you, top to bottom

/app/support → Needs your attention

One fixed panel that builds itself from live counts, already in order of urgency: urgent tickets, customers to chase, payments Finance sent back, claims still waiting, cases parked on a customer.

Work it in the order it gives you. It is sorted by how much the business loses if you do not.

When it is empty it says so — “Nothing is waiting on you. Every landed consignment is billed and no customer is owed a call.” That is a real state, not a screen that failed to load.

Clear what Finance sent back – first

Collections → Submissions → Rejected

A rejection means a customer believes they have paid and the business disagrees. Nothing is more urgent than that.

Open each one, read the reason Finance had to write, ring the customer, and take a corrected claim.

Nothing is deleted on a rejection. The claim, the refusal and the customer's original evidence all stay on the record. Do not open a fresh claim to bury an old one — raise the corrected one against the same bill.

Work the call list

Collections → The call list

Every consignment sitting in Dar that is already billed and not yet paid, with a phone number on the row.

Read the “Next action” column before you dial. A row that says “Confirm the price” means the invoice is still a draft — the business has not agreed that figure yet.

Never quote a draft. A draft is the system's price, not a bill. Asking a customer for a figure this business has not yet agreed to is how a quote becomes an argument.

TX-000098 · 34 DAYS · NEXT ACTION: RING THEM
Salum Rajabu · +255 712 ...		Draft
TX-000101 · NEXT ACTION: CONFIRM THE PRICE

Ring or message them

Collections → The call list → the WhatsApp icon

The Swahili reminder is already composed for you: the customer's name, tracking number, goods, invoice number, weight, the amount in shillings and where to pay.

Quote the row, never the band total at the top. The band converts at today's live rate and is an estimate; the row is the exact figure the customer was quoted.

Every call you make should end up written down. A conversation nobody logged is a conversation the next person on this desk has to have all over again.

Take their proof and hand it up

Collections → Record their payment

When a customer says they have paid, open the payment icon on their row. Everything except the reference and the attachment is filled in for you.

You must attach evidence. Finance cannot verify a reference on its own.

An iPhone HEIC photo is refused with instructions, because Finance must be able to open it. Ask for a screenshot, or have them set Camera → Formats to Most Compatible. One pending claim per bill — a second is refused by name.

GOES TO FINANCE TO BE CHECKED

Hand up to Finance

Tell them to collect – once it clears

Collections → Ready for pickup

When Finance verifies, the payment is recorded, a receipt is numbered, the ledger is posted and — if the bill is settled — the pickup note is minted and the cargo flips to ready for pickup.

You can read, print and search notes. You cannot issue one.

Do not tell a customer their cargo is released until the note actually exists. A customer sent to the warehouse too early is turned away at the counter, and it is your name they remember.

Work the tickets and the sourcing board

Tickets · Sourcing requests · Issues & Claims

Take calls, complaints and price enquiries as tickets. A customer link is optional — price enquiries arrive before people are customers — but a name or a phone number is required.

Move sourcing requests left to right: New → In progress → Waiting for customer → Supplier found → Completed.

You cannot close a ticket without writing what you did, and you cannot mark a sourcing request found or completed without recording what you found. Internal notes are never shown to the customer — write freely.

Rules that protect you

MONEY

A claim is not money

Your submission writes nothing to the invoice, the ledger or any balance. Only Finance's verification moves a figure — which is why nobody can lean on you to make cargo move.

DRAFTS

You cannot collect against a draft

A draft is the system's price, not a bill. Confirming is Finance's job; until they do, there is no figure to ask a customer for.

DUPLICATES

One pending claim per invoice

A second submission on the same bill is refused by name. Two claims is two people ringing the same customer and Finance checking the same money twice.

EVERY DOOR

Checked twice, always

The route is checked before the page loads and every action re-checks before it writes. A button you should not see is not drawn — and would still refuse if it were.

None of this is aimed at you. It is what lets one desk hold the customer relationship and the billing without ever being able to move the money — which protects you as much as it protects the business.

Mistakes worth knowing about

THE MISTAKE	WHAT IT CAUSES	DO THIS INSTEAD
Quoting the band total at the top of the page	You quote a live estimate; the customer pays a different figure and disputes it.	Quote the amount on the customer's own row.
Quoting a price that is still a draft	You ask for a figure the business has not agreed. It may change.	Wait for Finance to confirm the price.
Recording a claim with only a reference number	Finance cannot verify it and sends it back; the customer waits another day.	Always attach the screenshot or slip.
Opening a second claim when the first was rejected	Two claims on one bill; the system refuses it and the record looks like a cover-up.	Correct the claim against the same invoice.
Telling a customer to collect before the note exists	They travel to the warehouse and are turned away.	Wait until the cargo shows ready for pickup.
Closing a ticket with no resolution written	The system refuses it — and the next person has no idea what happened.	Write what you actually did.

Where everything else lives

SCREEN	WHAT IT ANSWERS
Search	Any consignment, by tracking number, customer, phone or description.
Customers	The customer book — history, contact details and everything they have shipped.
Shipments · Batches	Where a consignment is, and which flight it came on.
Collections	What is owed, who to ring, what you have handed up and what came back.
Pickup notes	Notes Finance has issued. You print them; you do not create them.
Price Configuration	The rate book. Read a quote off this, never from memory.
Tickets	Calls, complaints and enquiries, with the resolution written down.
Issues & Claims	Cargo under investigation. Ring the ones parked on the customer.
Sourcing requests	Customers asking us to find goods in China, on a board.
China markets	Which Guangzhou market sells what, so you can point them properly.

Three things carry this desk

1

Work the panel in its order

It is already sorted by what costs the business most. Do not pick by eye.

2

Never quote what is not agreed

Not a draft, not a band total. Quote the customer's own row.

3

Take the proof, not the promise

A reference on its own comes straight back. Attach the file the first time.

You hold the relationship; Finance holds the money. Keeping those apart is what lets you be completely straight with a customer about everything except whether their payment has landed.
