The money desk

Everything this business is owed passes through your screen, and no cargo leaves the Dar warehouse until you say it has been paid for. This is what to do when you sign in — in the order to do it.

GUANGZHOU

 DAR ES SALAAM

Two things only you can do

AUTHORITY ONE

Say that money has actually arrived

Customer Care can take a customer's word and upload their proof. They cannot mark it received. Until Finance agrees, the money does not exist as far as this system is concerned.

AUTHORITY TWO

Free cargo from the warehouse

The Dar counter cannot hand over boxes without a pickup note, and only Finance can issue one. When you issue it, cargo moves. When you do not, it stays.

Everything else on your menu exists to explain a number after somebody asks about it. Accounts, the ledger, expenses and reports are not daily work — they are where you go when the CEO asks where a figure came from.

Your day, in six moves

1

Read Home

The system has already written your to-do list.

2

Confirm the price

Turn the system's draft figure into a real bill.

3

Verify payments

Check what Customer Care says it collected.

4

Record payments

Money paid straight to you, into a named account.

5

Issue the note

The warehouse's authority to hand the cargo over.

6

Chase the rest

Work down Collections, oldest debt first.

NOTHING OWED YET

A draft is the system's working figure. Nobody has been asked for it.

OWED

A confirmed invoice. The customer owes it and the cargo is locked.

SETTLED

Verified money against the invoice. Only now can the boxes move.

STEP ONE OF SIX

Read what needs you

Sign in → Home → Needs your attention

Your to-do list, written by the system rather than by you. Prices waiting to be confirmed, payments waiting to be checked, cargo that has sat too long. Start here every morning.

If this panel is empty, the desk is clear — you do not need to go hunting through the other screens to be sure.

Finance sees the money, not the boxes. Your Home screen opens on The money · right now, while a warehouse hand signing in at the same moment sees cargo and no figures at all.

2 STEP TWO OF SIX

Confirm the price

Batches → open the batch → Confirm prices

When cargo lands in Dar the system prices it automatically and files it as a draft. A draft is a working figure — nobody has been asked for it and nobody owes it yet.

Confirming is what turns it into a real bill. Use Confirm all prices to clear a whole batch at once.

Confirming recalculates. It counts the storage days up to today and freezes the exchange rate at that moment — so a bill confirmed three weeks late correctly charges three weeks of storage. Never leave drafts sitting.

STEP THREE OF SIX

Verify what Customer Care collected

Finance → Verify payments

"Claims Customer Support has collected from customers. Nothing is settled and no cargo is released until you agree."

– THE SCREEN'S OWN WORDS

Open the claim, check the proof against the account the money should have landed in, then Verify or Reject.

Rejecting sends it back with your reason; it does not delete anything.

Do not verify from the amount alone. Match the proof to the account — a screenshot showing the right figure paid into the wrong account is the most common way money goes missing.

4 STEP FOUR OF SIX

Record money paid straight to you

Finance → Payments from customers

Cash at the counter, a bank transfer, mobile money, a cheque — if it came to you rather than through Customer Care, record it here. A receipt is issued automatically.

Always name the account it landed in. Every figure on the Accounts page is worked out from these entries, so an unnamed account is a figure that will never reconcile.

The system refuses an overpayment rather than quietly creating a credit nobody asked for, and refuses a payment dated before its invoice existed. If it says no, the numbers disagree — check them.

5 STEP FIVE OF SIX

Issue the pickup note

Finance → Pickup notes

“The warehouse's authority to hand cargo over. Issued by Finance the moment a bill is settled — everyone else prints it and rings the customer.”

– THE SCREEN'S OWN WORDS

This is the most important thing this desk does. Until the note exists, the Dar counter physically cannot release the boxes — it scans the carton and the screen refuses.

Issue it the moment an invoice settles. A customer standing at the counter with money already paid, waiting on a note nobody issued, is the one failure they will remember.

6 STEP SIX OF SIX

Chase what is still owed

Collections

Everything unpaid, oldest first, with a phone number beside it. Work down the list from the top — the oldest debt is the one least likely to ever be collected.

What you and Customer Care have already collected shows here too, so two people never ring the same customer twice about the same box.

Cargo under investigation appears here as well. Do not chase payment on a consignment the warehouse is still looking for — check Issues & Claims first.

Rules that protect you

CARGO

Unpaid cargo cannot be released

The counter checks the pickup note, the package, the investigation status and the carton count — all four, every single time.

INVOICES

A paid invoice cannot be edited

Once any money has landed against it, it is closed to changes. Correct it before the first payment, or raise the difference separately.

BALANCES

No balance is ever typed

Every figure on Accounts is derived from recorded movements, so the books cannot quietly drift away from the record.

THE AUDIT TRAIL

Nothing can be erased

Every money action carries your name and the time. It is append-only — it cannot be edited or deleted by you, or by the CEO.

If one of these stops you, it has just prevented something expensive. Do not look for a way around it — find out why the numbers disagree.

The rest of your menu

SCREEN	WHAT IT ANSWERS
General ledger	What the business is holding, what is owed to it, and what has moved.
Accounts	Where the company's money sits. Every figure derived from the ledger — nothing typed.
The Ledger	Every movement of money, with its account, who recorded it, and a running balance.
Expenses	What the business spends. Costs dated when incurred; the money dated when it left.
Pricing & configuration	The rate book. Change a figure here and cargo, invoices, tracking and reports all follow.
Audit	Every money action on the system, who did it and when. Append-only.
Shipments · Batches	The cargo behind the money, for when a figure needs explaining.
Issues & Claims	Cargo under investigation. Never settle a claim against a box still being looked for.

IF YOU REMEMBER NOTHING ELSE

Three moves are the whole job

1

Confirm the price

A draft owes nobody anything. Confirm it and the business is owed money.

2

Verify the payment

Match the proof to the account. Until you agree, the money does not exist.

3

Issue the note

The moment the bill is settled. Until it exists, the cargo cannot move.

In that order, every day. Everything else on your menu is there to explain a number after somebody asks about it.
